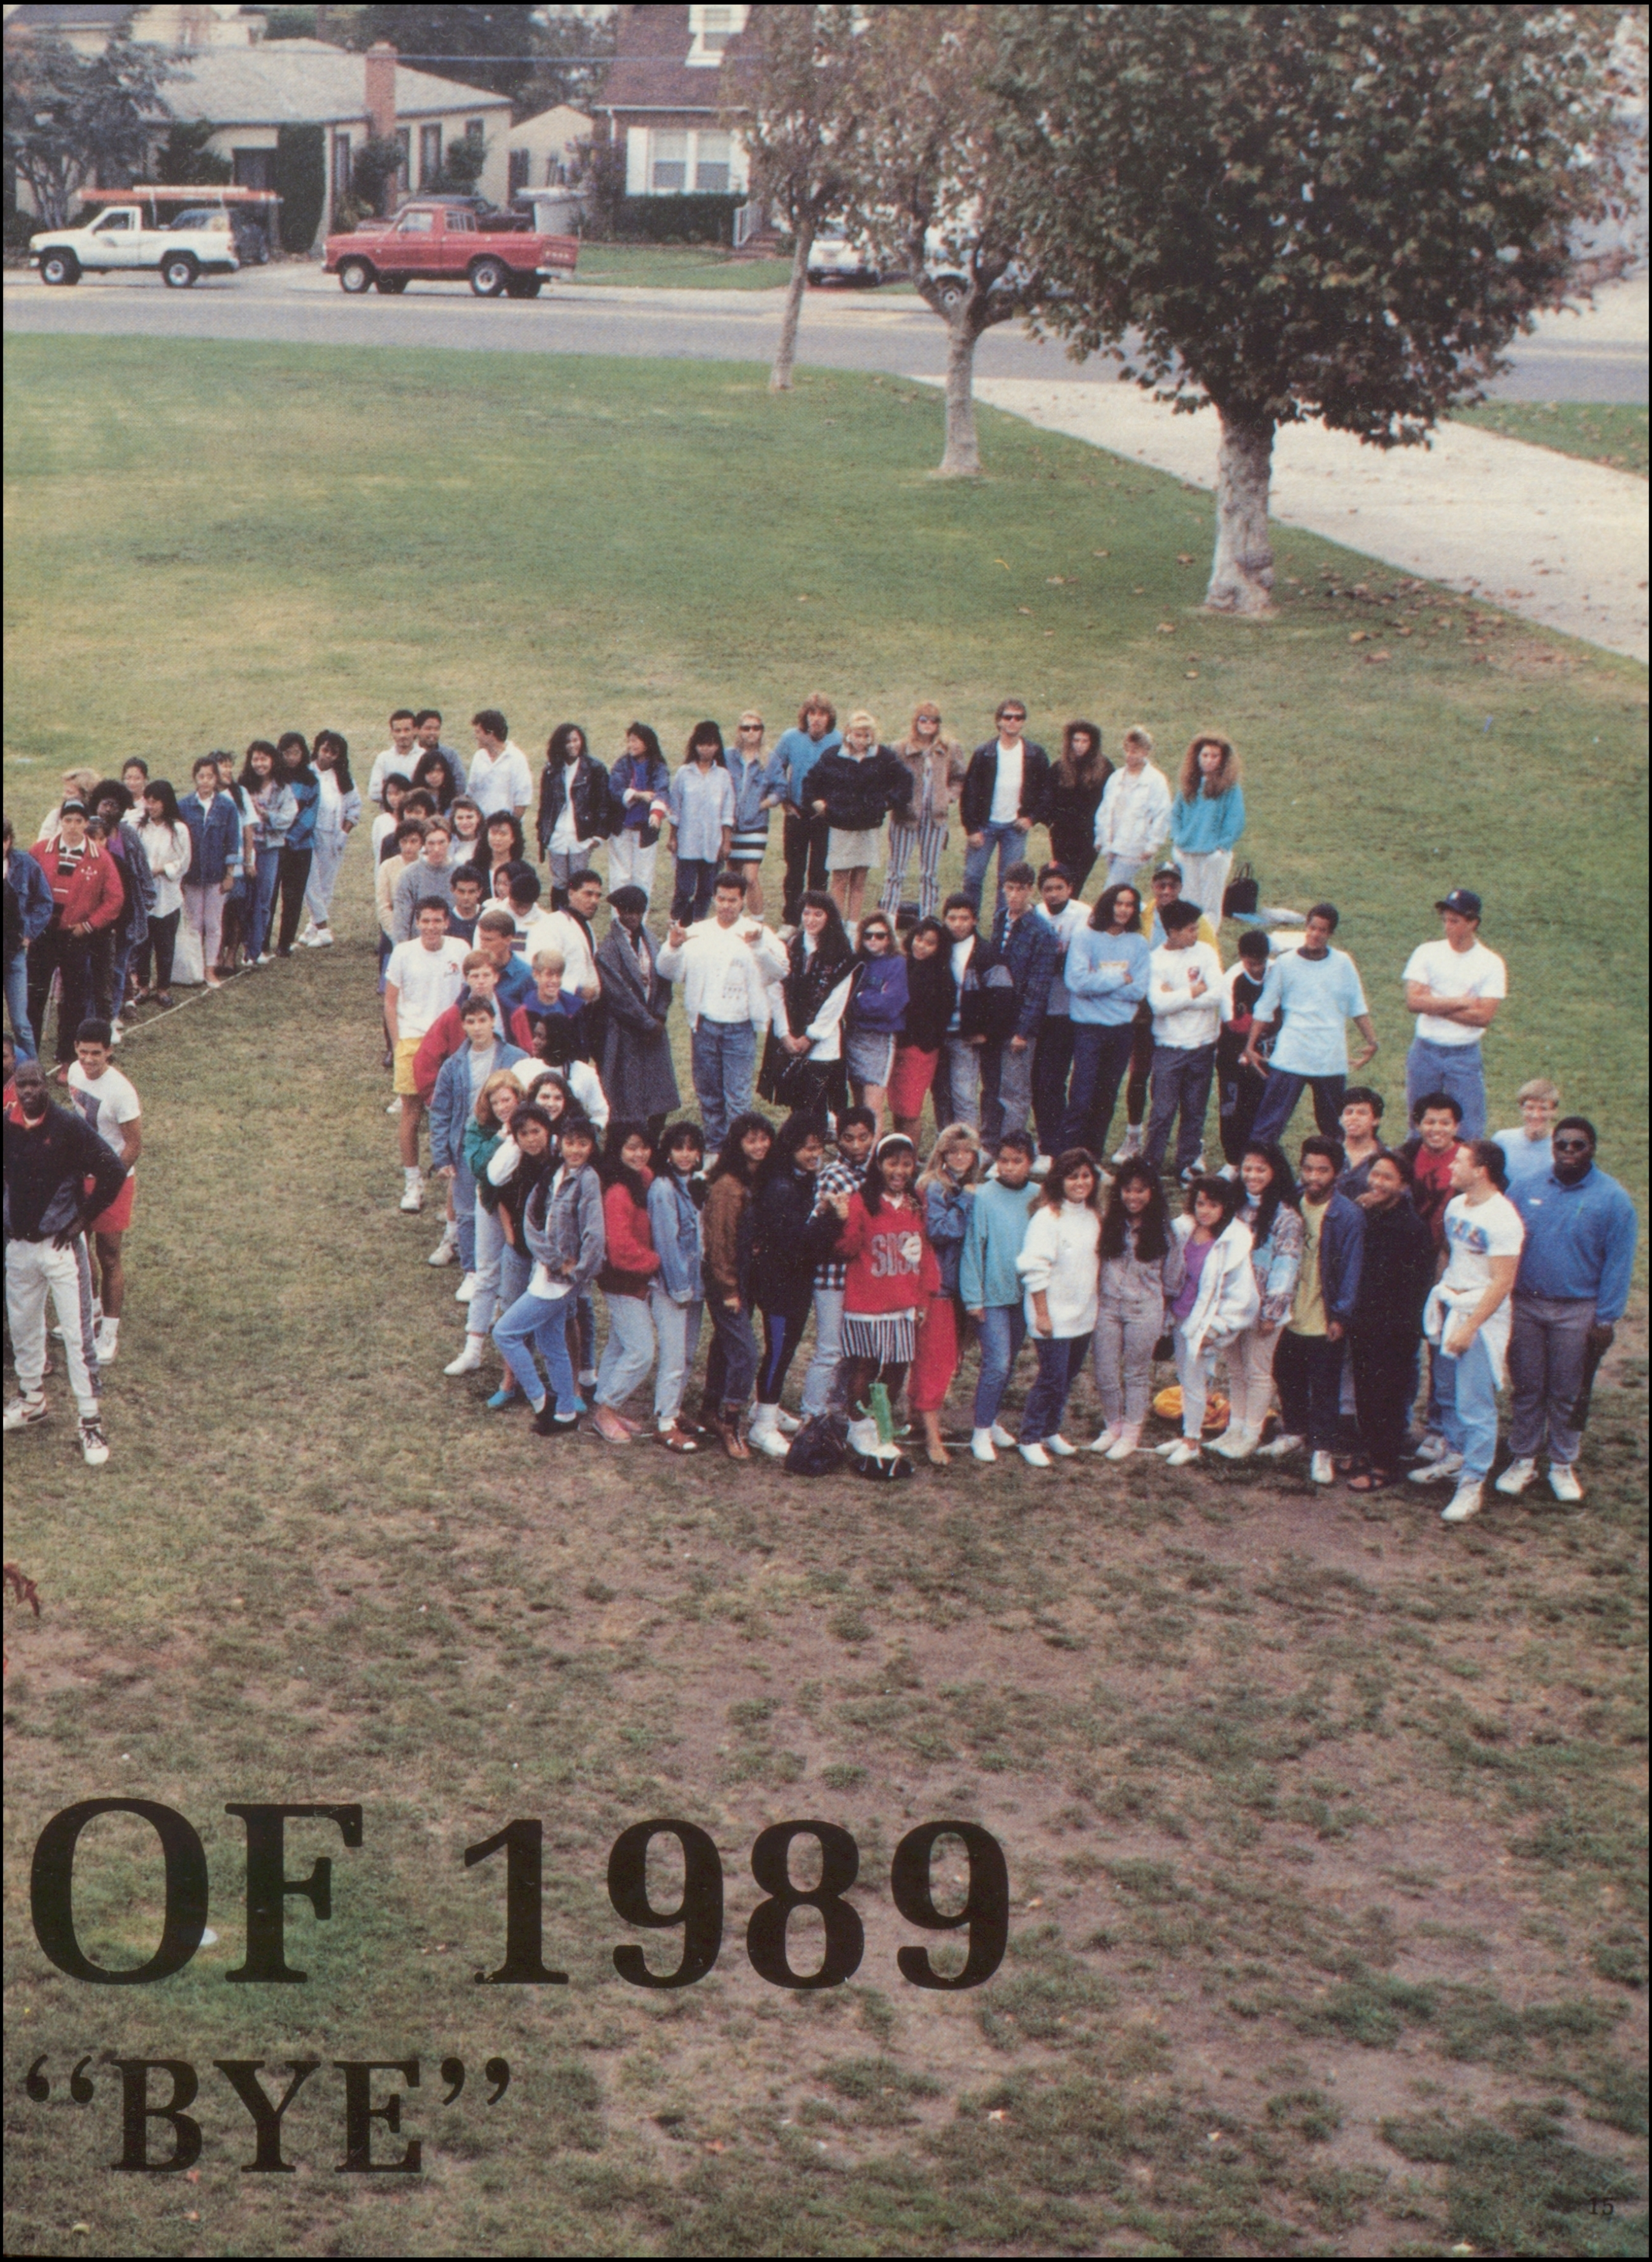
CLASS SAYS



OF 1989

"BYE"

Senior Spending Spree

"Scroogeism" was out when it came to the senior year, the art of penny pinching was dead, and the slick, well oiled money spending machinery that characterized the senior year took over and almost instantly depleted senior money piles. Mega expenses, excluding of course such minor items as car insurance and dental bills, chewed through a seniors cash faster than a Tasmanian Tarsir. The three biggest expenses for each senior were, the prom, Senior Fling, and senior portraits.

Before school began, the seniors had their senior portraits taken by the school photographer, Bordanaro and Zarcone. What did portraits mean? They meant money to be spent. Depending upon the Narcissus complex or model — like good looks of the individual senior, portraits scorched the old money-pile supply for anywhere from $50 to $280. Talk about taking a bit out of a senior's expense account.

The hole in the seniors wallets and purses grew bigger as Senior Fling popped up at the end of the year. The Class of 89 had the opportunity to enjoy the fun of Disneyland, the cool breezes of Catalina Island, and the thrill of Magic Mountain which cost a senior about $340. The Fling cost $240 while the $100 and up went to expenses such as food and souvenirs.

Last but no least, the big money gobbler of the senior year was the prom. $50 tickets alone gave anyone a shock. Girls purchased "The Dress" and guys rented a tuxedo. $20 fee was common for late tux renters and the thrifty girls refused to disclose the price tag that originally was attached to their special dress. A limo ranged from $40 to $65 an hour but parents were pleased as they knew the limo-riders would return home unticketed. The customary dinner before the prom was price tagged from $40 to $70 a plate at classy restaurants; however, at "Elegant restaurants" the girls' menu had no prices showing, the tuxedo-lad-money spending senior male worried about the dinner tab.

As the year came to an end, so did the seniors dried-out expense account. The bet in 89 was that each senior would spend $1000 for senior events and expenses.

Descriptions may seem extreme for what many consider another group of raucous youth. But the abilities these "children of modern society" posses are far beyond the preconceived notions of ninety — eight percent of the worlds population. Look into their eyes and see what you can see. Thanx mom dad cuz I Love CD!!!

English Gives Romeo A 20th Century Twist

"Calvin Capulet" chief of police was furious with daughter Julie. She sneaked behind his back and saw Romel, the son of the infamous mobster "Max Montague." Max was known to have been involved in the violet zapping of several known members of the so-called mob. Calvin Capulet vowed to kill Romel if he laid a finger on the figure of Julie. Sound familiar? This twisted version of "Romeo and Juliet" was only one rewrite of a classic in modern English set in present day situations. It was truly an assignment in ninth grade English, and Romel and Julie were followed by music. The music was less than a Broadway or video musical hit, but students wrote their own song to fit the plot of "The Pearl."

"Never On Sunday," a film from the sixties became a popular item for some sophomores as they viewed another interpretation of "Medea." Others saw "Medea" as beauty betrayed by an arrogant, insensitive man. In any case, the sophomores studied the Greek literature like "Medea" and the Roman contributions like "Julius Ceasar."

The tenth grade honors English class entered a national essay contest through the "Time Magazine" foundation. Their subject was, "Made In America," and how this particular statement affected all America from the business as well as the economic perspectives.

Upperclassmen spent the year with whale watchers, gore and adultery. They read "Moby Dick," "The Red Badge of Courage" and "The Scarlet Letter."

Seniors, on the other hand, finished their last year of English by proving that the Anglo Saxon tongue has survived and that the low German groups of languages, which included Dutch also made it to the almost 21st century, (1989). "How so?" someone asked. "Well," responded the most literate senior, "the earliest English poetry and literature originated on the shores of the North Sea, where the Rhine River ends."

"Beowulf" was as close as anyone came to producing the actual poetry that passed on to us from this early period. The literature and poetry of subsequent ages was filled with the phrases and reminescences of ancient voyages and battles that ranged from the "land, ho!" shouts of an ancient Odeysseus to Eric the Red.

Rememberance then was the reason, to some, which explained why English literature survived for such a long period of time.

Today, literature still lives through modern English classes and the ninth graders certainly proved that with their mad, murderous version of the ancient Greek story "Piramis and Thisbe," better known as "Romeo and Juliet."

Read the Bizarre Shockers Found in Language Classes

Dear Pal,

A bunch of us were rapping the other day and the talk turned to what we learned in school. Particularly to what we absorbed in Spanish or French as a second language. Actually I voted for "gutter talk" as a second language but by that time the conversation had turned serious and no one paid attention to me. They started with costs.

Costs outpaced knowledge, literacy, and vocabulary again in '88-89. In twenty foreign language classes, 447 Encinal students parlayed the intricacies of French and Spanish into genuine understanding of another tongue. Guess what! Now that they have pushed the cost of flying into the stratosphere and you literally pay an arm and a leg just to fly from S.F. to L.A., guess what students were taught? "Vuelo numero 304 sale para Espana; Le vol 305 part immediatement pour la France." That's right, now we learned flights 304 and 305 were departing for Spain and France.

Some thinkers imagined the cost versus knowledge scenario in a few years when teens abandoned McDonald's and matured into restaurant eaters. They probably knew, by then, the difference between Coquille St. Jacques and Ragout d' Ageneu, thanks to their years as foreign language students. But by that time some friends speculated that prices will have escalated to the point where one can only order "Le' grand Mac, sil vous plait."

In any case the Misses Keri Spaulding, Jean Rubin, and Maria Sanchez continued castanet training, flamenco dancing, and Ole shouting for their student linguists. Mr. Glen Fong spoke French which confused many, since he was of Chinese ancestory but lived in America. However, as some friends pointed out to this writer, they knew people who were born in England but spoke Hindi, lived in Italy, drove a German car, and were citizens of Hong Kong.

For most of the 400 who studied languages, different approaches and activities made the classes. For example, before one ever matured into a restaurant diner, Mr. Fong gave his francophiles french bread, my friends told me, the french bread tasted just like regular old Colombo sour dough. From my point of view, the teachers were thoughtful, but should have known pizzas and pepsi's precluded sour dough.

Got to to — bells about to ring and "Old Drone On and On," has shot another period.

Bye —

Souls Sing and Eyes Sparkle for Fine Arts

On September 6th of 1988, bright young faces, some tired young bodies, and a bunch of thinking artistic designers filled the rooms of Encinal's art classes. An amazing 317 future Picassos, Wedgewoods, and Frank Lloyd Wrights to be specific enrolled. Classes differed just as did students.

Some turned their ideas into genuine, artistic realities; they produced visual displays and practical works such as pottery and jewelry. The classes were well guided by faculty who shared their thoughts and experiences gained in dealing with the ins and outs of the various worlds of art.

Fine arts, so to speak, made the soul sing, the eye sparkle, and left the hands full. Music, jewelry, and pottery were all a part of the fine arts.

History in '89 Has Politics, Queens Bombs and Boats

What was new in '89' was spotlighted in senior government classes. Politically minded students supported either Bush or Dukakis for president. Such arguments were not really new, they reoccurred every fourth year. In spring attention turned to other factors of life. When the car bomb blew up Captain Rogers' wife's van, some people worried about a terrorist infiltration of the U.S.A. No one ate apples in March due to a pesticide scare, then the "Grapeshell" went off. Two cyanide grapes were imported into the U.S from Chile and magically grapes and all other fruit vanished from the stores.

When remained the same in '88-89? Freshmen tackled the more interesting women of history Hatshepsut, Cleopatra, and "Bloody Mary."

The Juniors fought the "Civil War" or "War between the States" one more time. They also received a dose of Alistair Cooke's interpretation of American History in 13 T.V. episodes. In all 714 students packed the history classes. Only the Sophomores escaped social studies.

Even without numbers there were some new wrinkles including new faces in '88-89. Gene Evens and Rick Schmidt came to Encinal from AHS and James Logan High respectively. Rick not only taught history, he also coached our water polo and swim team. Gene on the other hand was an Explorer Scout advisor who with his troops was in the process of rebuilding a P.T. boat. Bombs may damage vans but if a terrorist attacks the P.T. boat, scouts will be ready.

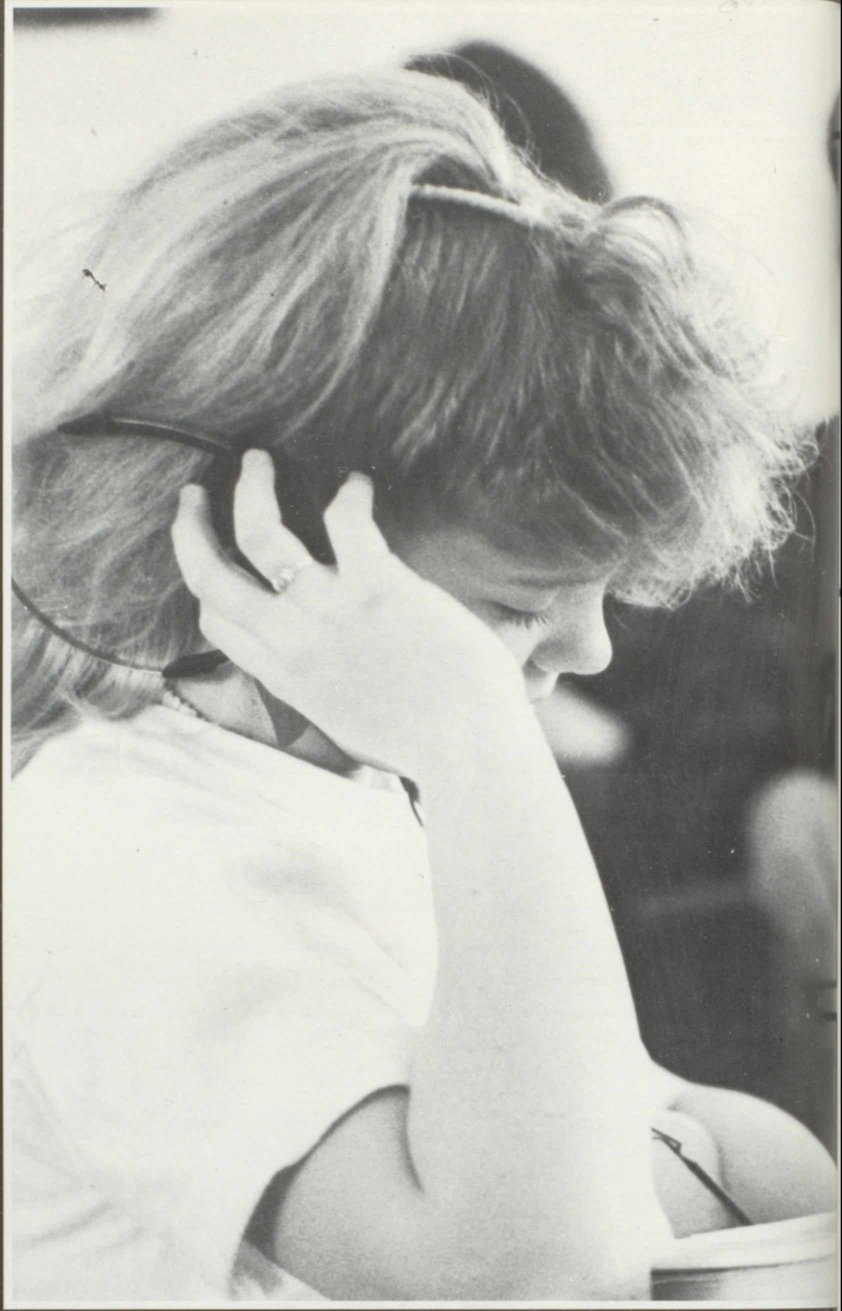
Future Creditors Learn Math Via the Apple Problem



"On your mark, get set, solve!," was not the usual line 9ol math students heard in past years; however that line summed up '89.

When the year began, students entered stages of math that ranged from the mysterious, brain stressing Calculus, to simple addition and subtraction in a course called Math Skills. Seven different math teachers had very unique ways of approaching their subjects.

One of the most intriguing teachers was Marta Skala, an Algebra teacher who always seemed to give the weirdest problems that usually ended with the same line: "What is ×?"

As the year passed other math teachers like Denis Knights, Alan Rebensdorf, and Kathi Vierra, tested their math students with killer thinking problems that always seemed to take forever to solve.

Math was a skill everybody needed as it would keep future consumers out of credit card trouble and let them solve the "Apple Problem:"

Three youngsters each had some apples to sell. The oldest had ten, the next oldest had thirty, and the youngest had fifty. But here's the rub: How was it possible for each to sell his apples at the same price and yet receive the same amount of money? Test your logic and look for the answer on pg. 208.

Sciences Include Slash and Cut, Plus a Few Fun Facts

KQED, education's premiere T.V. station, featured scientific scheduling had nothing on Encinal High. Encinal's science program was 300 students strong, Chemicals, periodic tables, and lab work were all part of any Junior chemistry class. The basic Freshman courses covering Earth Science and Oceanography differed in '88-89 from other years, as the classes included some Seniors. Actually the Seniors were shocked when they were placed in science. They discovered to their horror that the state of California said, without scientific study there was no graduation.

In Physiology and Biology classes the greatest attraction was "Slash and Cut" or, "Gross-Out Time" as various students referred to the events. What were these events? Simply stated, they were the dissections of various life organisms. In Biology, grasshoppers intestines were ripped out, and startled students discovered those ugly digestive systems were very similar to their own. Physiologists, proved their earlier scientific slash and cut training was still in place when they launched their super carving of fetal pigs. They truly had their own "gross contest" as they removed the pigs intestines, then carefully unwound them and magically showed to the Junior scientific world of EHS, intestines as long as a jump rope!

On the subject of interesting scientific news, people who worked with their brains needed more sleep then people who did physical labor. WARNING: Don't think about this too much.

Read On: From Foxes to Flowers R.O.P. Helps All

Food Management skills, restaurant accounting, and above all the art of being a chef, were skills that Terry Brandon, gourmet cooking teacher and world traveler, taught his students. From bombés and purees intermediate and advanced students experienced restauranting in all its forms.

Friday lunches brought Encinal's restaurant, The Blue Bistro, to life. Two student chefs, David Beck and Sean Maholland, triumphed with their "Jet" cuisine, a salmon special.

"Ready, set, Type" were words that rolled thoughout the Keyboarding room daily. In one minute the nimble fingered were supposed to tap out: "The junior office clerks were quite amazed at the extra reward given by their generous employer." Many students had never heard of junior office clerks, but were familiar with "The quick brown fox jumping over the lazy dog's back." Once the junior office clerks were mastered, any typist knew the two most used phrases to teach the keyboarding of every letter in the alphabet: one from jolly old England and the other from everyday USA.

Everything worked off of or through something else. Disks drove computers. Electricity charged Auto Shop equipment, and student repaired cars earned the repairmen good grades. ROP Auto Shop was generally a mad house as students developed skills that made them the "Mr. Good-Wrenches" of Encinal and job holders of the future. Kavun Hintz proved the point about the value of Mr. Potter's training in ROP Auto as he interviewed and then nailed down a job with Chevron Inc.

Vocational Education and The Regional Occupational Program expanded the choices of every student in Encinal. Classes that were optional for every student included floral design, Woodshop and Gardening. All in all from wok to wrenches, flowers to foxes, and from junior clerks to Junior students the program had something for everyone.

ENCINAL HIGH'S

SPECIAL

Special Education started with Ernie Ellis. His disability was a hook for a hand. From that disability developed classes that eventually evolved into SPECIAL EDUCATION. Specialists helped, tutored, and instilled a desire to learn in students who had learning disabilities. Disabilities came in many forms: in writing, reading, and even mathing (if there was such a word).

Problems focused on dyslexia, and dysgraphia. Dyslexia, a reading problem, prevented some students from seeing words as we saw them. A "but" to the normal eyed reader occasionally became a "dut" to the Dyslexic person.

Dysgraphie was frustrating to its sufferers. They saw the word as it was yet when they attempted to write "writing" it became "wrighting" in addition, they were not able to properly form the letters. Special classes and teachers attacked these problems and scored some remarkable successes.

Teachers involved in the program in 88-89 include Carol Haynes, Patricia Pederson, Ana Marley, Maria Rutter, and Monica Munger.

The Resource Program at Encinal provided a comfortable atmosphere where special students with ge uine needs received an education aimed at their nee and as a result they felt good about themselves. Th Resource Program prided itself on the fact that sma class, even super small (some one on one classes) pr vided individual education that truly made a producti citizen.

CLASSES

Helicopter around, Shoot for Turkeys, Live an ROTC year

an ROTC year

Supported by Colonel Freedman, Master Sargeant Madsen, and Sergeant Major Jackson the men and women of the Encinal JROTC unit had a smashing year. There were so many activities they seemed to beat down on the cadets like the drops of water in a rain storm. Helicopter rides gave the participants a bird's eye view of the bay area. For the physically fit, the Leadership Recreation Course promoted mastery of climbing techniques as the troops scrambled up and over obstacles.

Other activities included the annual Turkey Shoot at Encinal. A score of marksmen took aim and fired in the hope of winning a turkey of fifteen dollars. In July there was a Fourth of July parade and in November the battalion strutted their stuff in memory of the nation's veterans. The biggest the most prepared for activities were the December Review, and the May Competition Night. Company B won the 1988 Competition, so companies A and C super prepared for 1989's.

The most usual activity was going to class. Daily, a hundred and twenty junior warriors went to JROTC. They drilled on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and on Tuesdays and Thursdays, the Madsen-Jackson team put acrossed major information on leadership, oral communications, and map reading. Some lectures were like salami, dry; some were funny and all taught everyone something useful.

Company commanders Corey Ertz, Elmonte Hillard, and Robert Fabia walked around and around cadets on some Wednesdays when they ordered uniform inspections. A mirror like reflection was required by those eagle eyed officers so most cadets made their brass shine brilliantly and their shoes dazzled in reflected sunshine.

Following almost ten months of inspections, drills, and classes the battalion earned a reward in the form of a giant pizza party at years end. Several cadets grinned and agreed, "the pizza was the best part of all."

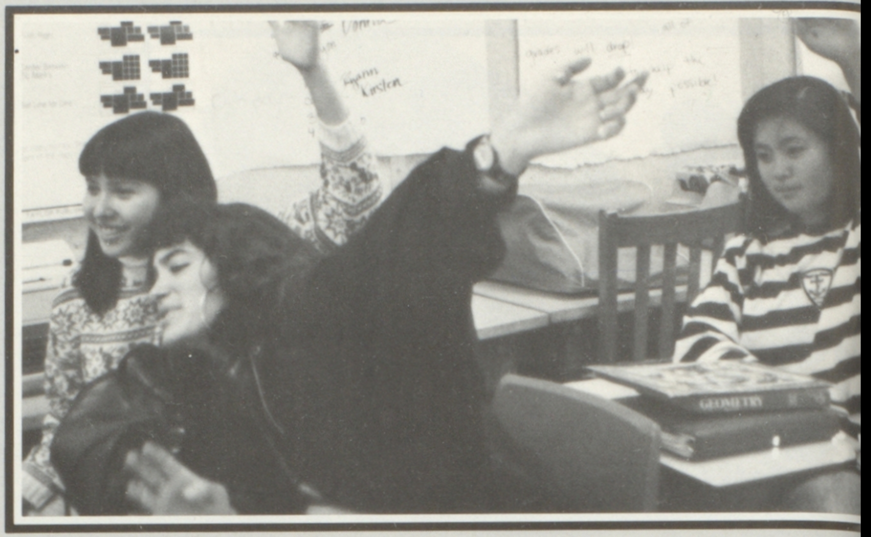
Follow the Leaders All the Way



Decisions . . . goals . . . decisions . . . and goals. Should the Homecoming Game and the Big Game be just one combined event? Whose week for candy or non-candy sales was it? Who was to perform for the next assembly or even the one after that? These were examples of the decisions the Leadership Class made. As the saying went: "Remember, the decisions we make and the goals we seek must not only be our own opinions but what we think is best for the school," Lisa Ferguson, Student Body President, often reminded the student senators.

Leadership goals included activities that produced "spirit" and "good fellowship" among all students. One method for reaching such a goal was to send the six officers and the three senators to CASC summer camp. CASC stood for the California Association of Student Councils and it presented a week of motivation and training for student leaders each summer. The first lesson usually taught to the student leaders was that to hold elected office meant they represented the entire student body and "working together" was the key to success.

Committees dominated class life. Every activity had its committee. There were dance committees, spirit day committees, and assembly committees. Those who manned the Christmas committee purchased and decorated not only the tree but also the decorations that made the halls festive. Their aim was to create a happy holiday mood throughout the school. Our Spirit Commissioner and her committee figured out the noon games, the prizes, and how to award prizes to the winners of the noontime spirit rallies. Committees were indeed the dominant method of getting Leadership programs off the ground.

A major first occurred in 1988. Leadership adopted or sponsored a nine year old foster child from El Salvador. Teen compassion was clearly evident in this case, for $22.00 a month someone with less than the advantages of America was helped. That kind of help was the greatest "spirit" and "good fellowship" that the leadership class could create.

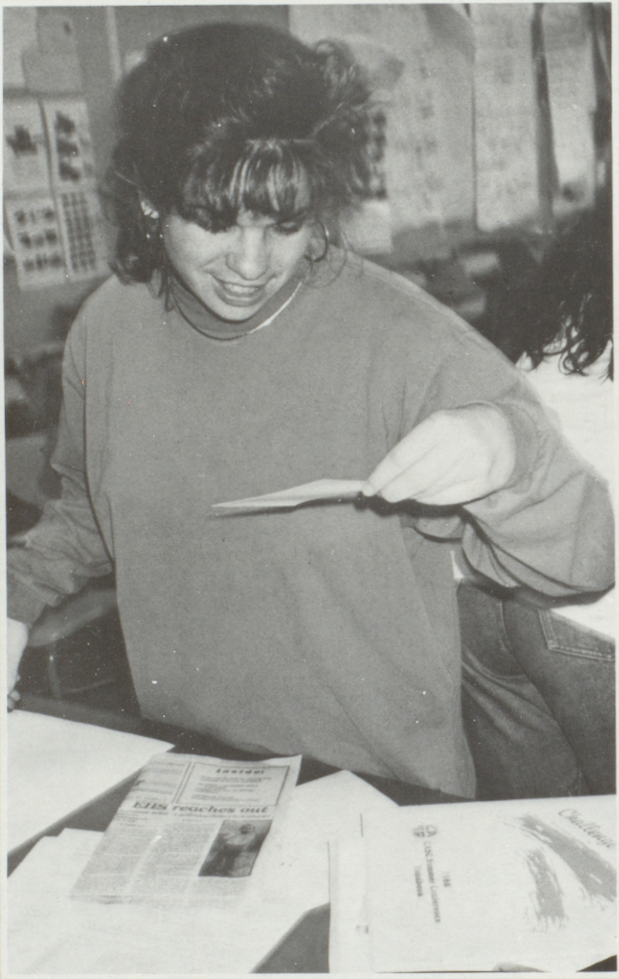
What motivated students to sign up for journalism or yearbook? How were these classes organized? Why did both have advertisement? Finally, who or what was provided to and for these future Literati?

Running a paper or a yearbook was complex and sometimes hectic for all junior journalists. One thing anyone with ink in their blood or photos on their mind learned about either class was both people and classes were organized, and that should read Organized with a capital "O."

The journalism class of seventeen ran the newspaper through a well structured system. Editor in Chief, Emily Nilsson held the responsibility of overlooking all of the journalistic progress. The staff of reporters and editors included Sherilyn Huie (News), Nikki Love (Editorial), Christina Delfin (Features), and Beathaney Dearing (Sports). All articles, reports, pictures, and advertisements submitted in any one editor's section of the paper were that editor's primary responsibility. Reporters used the semi-famous "Beat System", as often romanticized in the movies. In reality each reporter was assigned a number of teachers.



Most of the stories derived from fa ulty interviews. Helen Harris, journa ism advisor, regulated the paper's co tent, consequently The Jetsetter w pretty sophisticated to most hi schoolers. There were those, natura ly, who would have preferred a scho paper that was a cross between Spor Illustrated swimsuit edition and t National Enquirer.

The eighteen member staff of T Horizon took journalism to ne heights of "laid-backisim" until deadline drew near. Then it was pan and chaos and the organized syste they claimed to have seemed as ali as a Brontosaurs dancing the Tango.

Co-Editors Amy Ho and Richard B noan not only overlooked the produ tion works, including the Tango, b they also were responsible for assig ing two-to-four layouts to each stude journalist. Layouts were due on giv deadline dates. In our system, ea person was very much like a sm sectional editor; they were responsi for their entire layout. Everythi from brilliantly written copy to ph tographs and advertisements were p a Horizon staffers work load. The ly compromise was on the subject of rilliantly written copy — some of it as not too exciting or factual but staff riters each thought their copy was BODACIOUS" if not "bogus" or even xcellent."

Both publications had different rms of organization but a similar urpose: to record, to inform, and to terest Encinal students. In the long n they got their job done pretty moothly and efficiently.

Students who flipped to the end ages of the yearbook or who buried heir noses in the newspaper always sked: Why are there so many adver- sements in the publication? A simple uestion earns a simple answer. Ad- ertisements were an absolute neces- ty in order to keep the constantly sing costs of publication down for oth the book and the paper. With hree schools in town yearbook staff- rs spent part of the summer hustling erchants for ads. Such hustling tac- cs were necessary as ad. pages went publication in early December. Jet- etter journalists were required to ac- umulate at least one ad. per month. Each Horizon hustler was required to see a minimum of $220 worth of ads. By the December publication time staffers had hustled ads. from merchants, benefactors, and parents. The editors estimated a whopping $4,000 worth of advertisements helped offset an $18,000 cost of yearbook publication. Furthermore if no ads. were produced a yearbooker could also estimate, accurately, a report card grade of at least S-, and that's a long way from a passing D alphabetically. If a journalist returned empty AD-handed, an "F" could be their grade. Either way "F" or "S-" were known to be hard grades to explain at home.

The final answer to what motivated students to subject themselves to publication stress and strain must be the product produced. The newspaper is better now than ever before in our schools history, so say old time faculty members. And the yearbook has been a run away best seller, totally sold out the last few years. To paraphrase current culture, students get "good time" and "great taste" (in reading) with The Jetsetter-Horizon.

Food to Entertainment, Junior Year Filled with First

The class of 1990, commonly called the juniors, continued America's obsession with being number one. They were the first class to specifically design homecoming T-shirts that featured the never before used words: "Jet Pride." The ninetiers were the first junior class to ever wind up in a three way tie for first place in Spirit Week competition. Another first featured food. During the junior noncandy sale in the first week of October, they pushed, pedaled, and purveyed fancy feast items such as fruit kabobs and cream cakes.

The juniors' greatest first occurred during Homecoming Spirit Week. The famous Walk of Fame, Hollywood, the sexy Rocketts, and hundreds of bright shining stars transformed the junior hall into the winning hall for Homecoming '88 and "That's Show Biz" reigned as the class theme. Artistically crafted props and decorations categorized the juniors' outlook on show business and filled the hall. There, the 1930's with Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire appeared in posterart and the "Rockin' 80's" with Robe Base was also shown. Theatrical life was alive at E.H.S. as old classics such as "The Wizard of Oz" and "Romeo and Juliet" were part of the junior presentation of the winning hall. The juniors obviously put a lot of time and hard work into their try at winning Homecoming Week activities. They even stayed at school until after 9:00 p.m. on the final night before the judges scoped out the decorated halls and rendered their decision. "It was all worth it," commented a few satisfied juniors, for their class treasury was enriched with $100.

The class of '90's entertaining skit, "It's Showtime at the Apollo" featured Alex Ham, George Kinard, Glenn Aure, and Manuel Gonzales. These guys gave the student body their version of time travel as they attempted to become Dianna Ross and the Supremes with their famous hit, "Stop in the Name of Love." Their hilarious routine with swaying hips and frog leaps had the audience laughing hysterically. Their presentation of themselves in frilly, flowing dresses an tons of bright make-up was as funn visually as were their athletic antic that helped interpret the song. Th Jackson Five became five female juniors dressed in curly wigs and checkered bell-bottoms. When they dance off stage, on came Sonny and Che who were in reality none other tha Luisa Su'esu'e and Ian Woolley. Romantically, they looked deep into each other's eyes and sang "I Got You Babe." For the grand finale o "Showtime," time moved from the da of the faculty's teenage years to th present with Rob Base and his hit ra single, "It Takes Two." Tami William was Rob Base, and she had the audience rockin' to the beat of the favorite music of today.

Overall, Homecoming week was a important and special event for everyone. The class of 1990 had lots o fun, lots of spirit, and scored lots o firsts which appealed to everyone.

"Bloody Special Days"

Questions, and more questions were fired thick and fast before any of the "Special Days" at school. If the activity was a noon Spirit rally some of the most asked questions were: "Is it messy?" "Will it mess my hair?," and "How much time will it take?" Hairy-Scary Day was a prime example. Curlers, bobby pins, and rubber bands tangled hair and no one objected. Even whipped cream was used to cover faces, but not to mess the hair!

Halloween was a future event, but the tenth of October was a bloody day. That day seventy-eight pints of blood dribbled, dripped and gushed out of bloody arms of faculty and students. Another special day — A Gift of Life Day — filled Encinals blood bank reserves, for those who needed that most precious commodity, to over 128 units, the second Gift of Life Day was scheduled for April 1989.

The newest and perhaps the most special day occurred in November. E.H.S. Leadership class had decreed that November was "Date for a Day" time. Students dressed as though they were twins, and pairs of dates escorted each other to classes. It was a fun day because the idea was novel and it gave students a chance to pick a new date, and get to know one more fine individual. Two more "specials" enriched the symbols and colors of Christmas. Holly Jolly Day, made red and greens the pre-dominant colors of Encinal for one Thursday. Red and pink colors streaked through the school as hearts and cupids dominated February's famous festival.

Spring specials featured pastel colors during spring fever week, lawn lunchtime volleyball, barbecue, and a beach bum spectacular. The year ended with questions and more questions as some asked "what are we going to do next year?"

Twist and Shout

"Don't Worry Be Happy," was the theme of Encinals opening dance, and that's what many students had on their mind. Students mixed it up to the beat of Ladda Sounds. Along with playing some of the fresh tunes of 89' they went back and played some oldies but goodies of the 50's and 60's. Some of the songs that students strutted their stuff to were Bobby Brown's "My Prerogative", The Beatles "Twist and Shout", and even Al B. Sure's "Rescue Me."

Homecoming dance which was sponsored by the Leadership class hit it off well. After the King and Queen were crowned everyone danced the night away to some of their favorites. "Right Stuff" by New Kids on the Block, and "Dial my Heart" by The Boys. Tickets were sold for $7 single and $10 per couple.

Mix and Match gave everyone the opportunity to meet that special someone. Students were given different colors at the door. During the dance the Dj's (Ladda Sounds) announced a color and everyone looked for a match. This brilliant idea by the Sophomore class brought them in $900.

The night was danced away on December 16. It was time for the Winterball. This dance was sponsored by PTSA. Students were able to have their pictures taken in front of Encinal's Christmas tree. Free tortilla chips and popcorn were offered for those who had the munchies. Semi-formal was the attire but most students dressed for comfort.

Over all this was a great year for Encinal's dances. Great profits, new friends, and a lot of fun for all those who participated.

You've Got to Want It — And We Want it More

"Let's go Jets ... Don't give up now" ... "Fire it up crowd ..." Although it wasn't a full victorious year for the Jets Varsity Football team, the Jet spirit stayed alive, game after game, as the spirit squads held their chins up with smiles as they chanted, "You've got to want it ... to win it ... and we want it more ..."

The 1988 Fall cheerleaders and pom pon squads practiced and made routines that they planned on taking to the United Spirit Association cheerleading camp in the summer. EHS squads proved their high energy when they won the most spirited or the "Spirit Stick" award all three days they spent at the camp. The rest of the summer, the girls spent hours each day perfecting their new cheers and routines they had learned at the USA camp.

When school began the squads were ready to perform at their weekly football games and rallies. Practices were held after schools, four days a week. School spirit days also were planned out by the spirit leaders and the guardian angel tradition continued where the girls anonymously gave one or two football team members a bag of fruits and snacks to boost their spirits and wish them luck for their game. In return, the varsity and JV teams provided transportation to away games for the girls.

Because they enjoyed cheerleading, six out of the fifteen girls continued onto the basketball season. The basketball season cheerleaders and pom pon girls were invited by the United Spirit Association to perform at the East West Shriner's Game, January 15, at the half time production with about 400 other girls.

Dialogue and Music Paintings and Songs Keys to Drama Hits

"The Late Christopher Bean" opened December 10th. Kym McGowan and Ryann Haines turned in polished performances as the daughter and the maid. The maid, married to Chris Bean, turned out to have the dramatic flair and dialogue to match, a fact which turned the audience into cheering partisans of Encinal dramatists.

Oklahoma, a mega hit on Broadway, became the second musical ever put on by the Encinal drama department. As a show Oklahoma was wonderful because few productions ever have twelve major speaking parts and a supporting thirty-four singers and dancers. Everyone, the only appropriate word, had a chance to star. Oklahoma was a classic and on occasion students actually heard faculty members and fellow students humming the tunes they remembered from the show. Among the tunes were "Surrey With a Fringe on Top, I'm Just a Girl Who Cain't Say No, and Oh What a Beautiful Morning." Of course not too many faculty or students hummed "Oh What a Beautiful Morning" unless it was a Saturday or a Sunday.

The actors and actresses all agreed that a special thanks was due to the Stage Craft Class. Those unsung, hard workers built all the sets for the plays and the assemblys. Their work made school productions possible.

The Court for Homecoming

The Homecoming Week of 1988 began with high energy and spirit in the air. The spirit week started with a little "South of the Border" feeling as classes and clubs sold tacos and burritos during lunch to many students dressed to fit the theme. Each class distinguished themselves with "Class Color day." Seniors dressed in black and green, juniors in red and white, sophomores in purple and gray, and the freshmen in yellow and brown. "Mourning for Alameda High" offered the Jet sympathy with students dressed in black. The spirit week continued with "Class Theme day" — The overall idea of homecoming decorations of halls. Seniors' theme was "World Peace '89", juniors — "That's Show Biz", sophomores — "Boogie Down the Decades", Freshmen — "That's where it all began." But the true Jet pride was clearly displayed when the EHS colors scattered all around for "Blue and White day."

It was at the homecoming assembly where the class skits, after hours of rehearsals, were performed and competition between the classes never seemed so fierce with all four striving for the top place. Also at the assembly, King Matt Boone and Queen Pia Lozano were crowned along with the First runner-up, Tim Canalin and Lisa Ferguson; Second runner-up, Aaron Butler and Angie Cheng; Third runner-up, Blair Venables and Tanya Ilarde; Fourth runner-up, Brocke Dickie and Val Magpoc.

The Spirit Week ended with the Homecoming Dance where the court was given a spotlight dance to the songs "Make it Last Forever" and "Always and Forever."

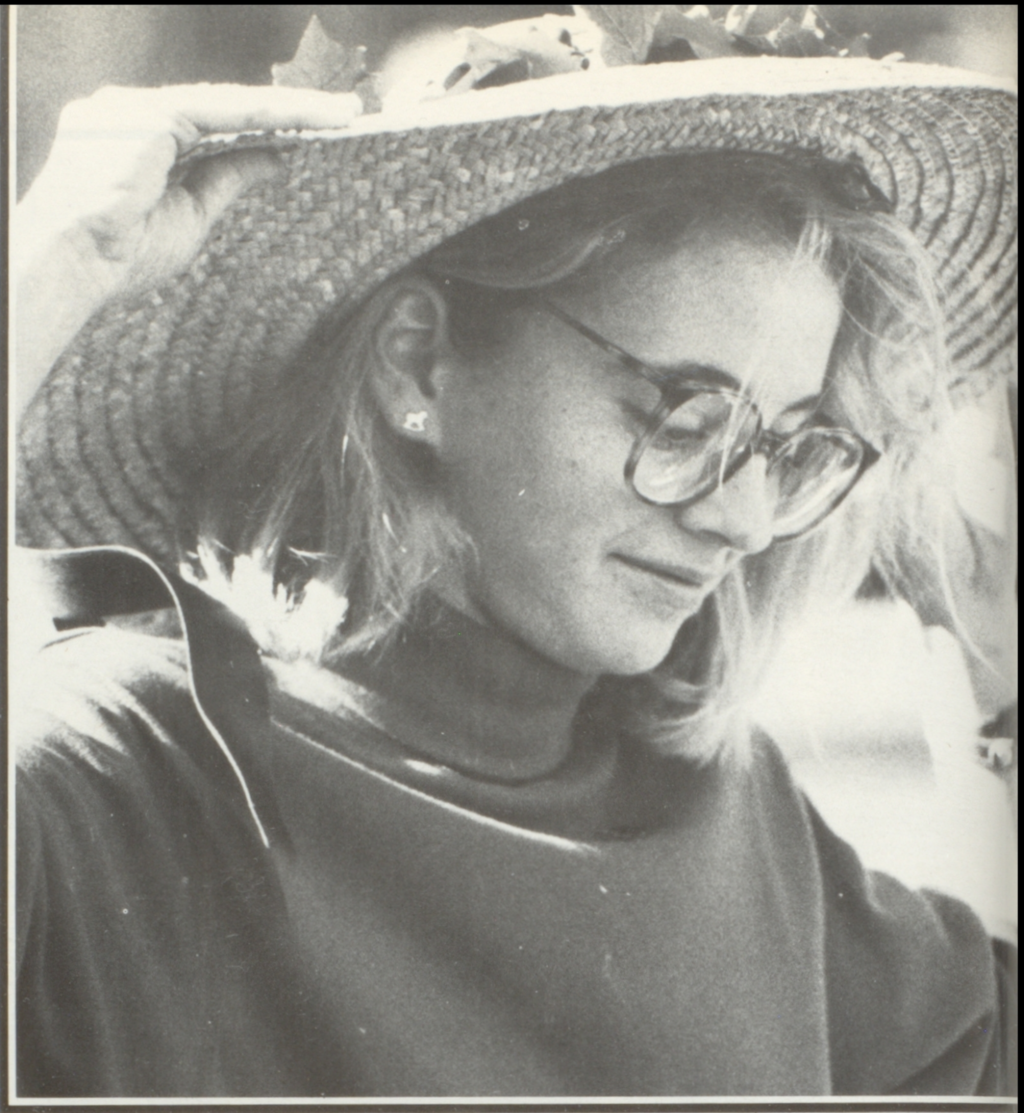
Fourth Hat Day Draws Criticism



Move over Presidents Bush and Reagan, you were not the only ones with photo opportunity days. Encinal students had such a day and called it their Fourth Annual Hat Day. Some students felt it should have been called the last hat day. When this photo event first developed in Fall 1985, people wore baseball hats, fisherman hats and berets to school. Some wore fancy Chicken Hats, Santa Caps, dunce caps and sombreros. In essence hats were everywhere.

In 1988, the selection of hats heed the ideas behind their clearly declined. First prize was won by a student who inverted a book bag on his head and called it a chapeau. For this reason some students felt photo hat day was a photo bust event!

Even though many disliked the winning hat, there were other hats that caught the eye. Alicia Jarmillo wore the equivalent of an Easter bird nest full of yellow chickadees peeking and pecking between the Easter eggs and artificial flowers. Brian Anderson capped his head with a Chinese Coolie Laborers straw hat. Bethany Dearing's intellectual trick was to take a summer straw hat and cover it with holly leaves and Christmas red blobs, and it was effective!

The "el-cheapo" hat of the day was the folded newspaper triangular job; that was understandable as many students preferred to spend money on essentials, like pizza, rather than nonessentials like Spirit day hats.

A little after noon, the Spirit Day committee gathered the wearers for judging. The decision of the audience was final, and the more applause the more acceptable the hat. The aftermath of a book bag beanie as the bold best topper gave the Spirit Day committee and the Yearbook, which donated the prizes, a chance to review the gala. Both groups decided that next years hat hash would feature some rules as to what was a hat, and even categories for hats.

Dentists Must Love EHS Clubs, Candy Finances Everything

FBLA, Future Business Leaders of America was a school and community organization that emphasized business. The twelve active members of FLBA raise $900 with one off-campus candy sale, two on-campus candy sales, and a swithch to nacho sales.

On Saturday, March 6, FBLA'ers entered a variety of subject competitions in the FBLA District Competition. Members competed in information processing, accounting, advanced key boarding and computer concepts.

The oldest club in school was the Key Club sponsored by the local Kiwanis. From its founding in 1956 until today this unique club promoted school and community service as well as leadership and good citizenship.

In 1989 Key Club members sponsored a foster child, visited the elderly on Saturdays, and promoted "Balloons for Peace" in April. Their money came from exotic sales of lumpia, nachos, and pickles.

Junior Statesmen of America was a government oriented club designed to make politically aware students involved in politics. While members attended conferences that featured politically important guest speakers their method of raising money interested students the most. JSA members opened their pockets and pulled out dollars, no nacho sales for them!

CSF did not stand for Cookie Snatchers for Freedom — CSF was the prestigious California Scholarship Federation and entrance fees were the toughest. One needed a minimun 3 point grade point average. Like most other groups CSF'ers raised dollars through candy sales, then they turned around and raised another hundred dollars for the Armenian Earthquake Relief Fund.

Francophiles or French Clubbers had an awesome reputation. Sly seniors told freshmen that the club watched "You know — French flicks at lunch!" They did indeed watch French films, but alas, they were the televised version of the Tour de France. On the other hand the Voulez-vous'ers" also pedaled candy but they used the proceeds to "Truffle-out" at an authentic French restaurant.

Flamencos were out and food was in as the Spanish clubs eleven made lumpia an item the club sold. With pockets full of cash the "Ole and Torro" troops invaded a genuine Mexican restaurant called La Fuente — Many tacos, avacado dip and tostadas later the club members left and the money they earned had changed hands.

Not to be outdone the Asian club members searched for the fast buck too. Originality took over as they peddled nachos, lumpia, and real wontons. The members proved to be smart enough to spend their wealth at Great America instead of a nearby restaurant. Smart people don't eat a lot or have a full stomach for the Great American rides. On the other hand, club members also helped our community as they visited convalescent homes.

Peppy sponsor Leland Stanford brought this from the past back for the second year in a row. Seventy-two members sold pickles and organized the "Hello Day" noontime dance in September. With over /000 in the treasury, the Pep Club donated $50 to the Pompon/Cheerleading squad.

Skiers put on their snow bunny outfits for a turnaround to Kirkwood in December. Ski Club members raised $500 with that ever popular candy. Due to a lack of personal funds, the three day ski trip to Heavenly Valley on January 26-28 was cancelled.

FFA was not Fast Fiddlers Amalgated it was our branch of Future Farmers of America. Members attended state and regional conferences at San Luis Obispo and U.C. Davis. Afterwards, someone said FFA'ers planted seeds and presto-grow and they had plants-galore. They were not immune from selling candy but, thank the Lord, they skipped nacho and lumpia. They sold their specialty called "plants" and amassed $1000 in the process.

Triumphant Sophs Win a Homecoming First

First place in Homecoming and a $100 award plus a record number of classmates participating in a skit were two of the triumphs the Sophs scored early in the school year. Never in the history of Encinal High had a Sophomore class achieved a first place for Homecoming, but that's America as another tradition bit the dust in '88.

Homecoming had three segments: hall decorations, noontime games, and the Spirit Assembly. 1988 was a record year as three classes split first place. The Sophs started early and chose "Boogeying Down the Decades" as their theme. For three weeks, Sophs assembled in various locations to rehearse the steps for each section of the skit. When finally put together, the side-stepping, hip-hopping Sophomores filled the stage with forty dancing dervishes who showed the world how the Charleston of the 1920's was really done. Then came the Jitterbug crew who not only were costumed like the WAFS of WWII, but also made the music of Glen Miller come alive with their routine. Following the 1940's came the bouncing teenagers of the 1950's who flaunted their poodle skirts, "twisted," and "swam" to "At the Hop." Next, a group of Hippies drifted onto the stage, doing the Pony and promoting peace and flower power to the Grateful Dead's classic "Hair." Then the stage was transformed into a Disco, and John Travolta-inspired dancers in bell bottoms spinned across the floor to "More Than a Woman." And just when you thought you were in a permanent time warp, the sounds of M. C. Hammer were heard as six chillin' chicks strutted and impressed the audience with the coolest moves of the 1980's: the Cabbage Patch and the

Robocop.

The Sophomores were able to choose their own theme, but they had no such luck with their class colors: they were given gray and purple, a combination they were sure had been chosen by colorblind upper classmen. But the Sophs accepted their fate and began the task of camouflaging the barren walls of Encinal. Camouflage they did, and by the time the judges came around, the Sophomore hall was a conglomeration of musical notes, records, streamers, posters, balloons, and dancing figures.

As the year went on, the class of 1991 put the triumphs of Homecoming behind them and concentrated on a true American goal: making money. Bypassing the traditional theme of "Mad Hatters Ball" for their Soph Hop, the class of 1991 optioned to compose their own theme and came up with "Match Up Soph Hop." Yes, there was a method behind the match making madness. As soon as the student paid his $5, he then received a piece of paper colored red, yellow, blue, or green to pin to his clothes. During certain songs, the Ladda Sounds DJ's announced two color groups; each member of one color could ask a member of the other color group to dance. Nifty, eh? Love connections were made on the Encinal gym dance floor, as the students danced to the pulsating beat of New Order and Depeche Mode. All in all the class of 1991 earned a hefty $920 to add to their American dream.

Following formidable traditions, the Sophomores sold class rings in November. The focus was on beating the '87-'88 sale of 52 rings. Success was sweet and their goal was reached: 80 rings were sold and $80 was earned. The Sophs also proved adept at turning candy into gold; while Encinal gained pounds, the Sophs gained $300.

As the class's sophomore year came to a close, the students began to make plans for an even better Junior year. "We're gonna get better every year!," voiced Jessica Rodriguez, class treasurer. The rest of the school seemed to agree. Arthur Roke, World History and Leadership Advisor, was overheard commenting, "Just wait until they're seniors."

Varsity Football Passing Attack ProducesWinners

Two victories salvaged a season that had all the earmarks of disaster. On November fourth the Jets demolished Albany's Cougars, 35-0, and avenged their final game loss to Albany in 1987. On November eleventh the high flying Jets put the skids on the Richmond Oilers as they stomped the foe by ten points and posted a 32-22 win. These two victories came at the end of the season and left the Jets feeling good about themselves and about taking on anyone next year. The record by itself showed a three and seven season for the Jets in "88." The real record of the season lay in the performance of scrapy individual Jet players.

Lamont Rider threw seven passes in the Albany game and five of them were caught by Eric Alden, who scampered, sidestepped, and swerved into the end zone for three touchdowns. Eric, also called Mr. Intercept, got into the art of pass grabbing when he picked off an Albany pass early in the game as he scooted downfield and promoted a Jet first down. Lamont Rider wasn't the only artist, for Greg Johnson lofted the pigskin with deadly accuracy to Eric Alden in the Monterey game, "Tight end Alden hauled in the 70 yard bomb to turn the pass play into a touchdown."

The Albany game was a great victory, it had been dedicated to Junior and Emanuel Leota's father who died the Monday before the game. The Albany game was no contest, the Jets advanced 380 yards and limited Albany to a mere 89 yards. Against Kennedy the Jets once again hinted at their potential. The opponents were baffled by a tremendous 92 yard pass and run combo that scored the only touchdown. Running back Joel Thornton had an excellent year as he put the move on his rivals. He was an athlete who could run like the wind and make plays like the fumble recovery at the Monterey game that led to a 23 yard gain and a touchdown. Later in the same game Joel's kick off recovery led to an 88 yard touchdown run.

The season may not have been outstanding but the players' plays were.

Sweet Taste of Victory Ends JV Football Season

Unforgettable games were those the junior Jets, better know as the E.H.S. J.V. Football Team played against Albany and Richmond. Albany snatched victory from the Jets in the last minute of play but Richmond was pulverized.

The most frustrating game was against Albany. With 6:31 left in the game, the Jets received the ball on their 35 yard line. Ball control was their specialty as they moved the pigskin all the way downfield and it seemed as if they couldn't be stopped.

1:38 left in the game, fourth down, and the ball on Albany's 8 yard line, the jets needed a specialist kicker and better yet a field goal. Fate seemed totally against the Jets as they had no kicking specialist and thus no field goal possibility. They were forced to play the down. It was as though there was a jinx on the Jets for on that fatal down, Albany intercepted and the Jets lost 14-12.

30-0 was the score, Jets 30 and Richmond was zip. Victory tasted all too sweet as it was the last game of the season.

On the bright side, the J.V. Jets Football Team had two Freshman Running Backs who helped tremendously on offense, Jin Wu Kim and Andre Shelton. Mohamed Isa had an outstanding season on our defense.

The Freshman Football Team didn't do so well. They ended the season one and five, one win and five losses.

"Challenge" is the Word for Cross-Country Runners

Trophy time arrived November tenth when the EHS Cross-Country team grabbed second place in the East Shore Athletic League. Their award was the result of long and hard daily workouts after school. The award came to our runners because they were so dedicated they even followed their coaches recommended workouts on weekends. The road to Trophy Ville was filled with sweat, sore muscles, and a six-day workout schedule. The top three Cross-Country league finishers were Blair Venables, Matt Boone, and Brock Dickie. The female counterparts of the dedicated who ran were Kiran Grewal, Christine Roveda, and Bethaney Dearing.

Both the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams consistantly finished second and "Challenge" became the operational word for all Cross-country runners. Those who ran on the Stanford Invitational included senior Blair Venables who finished second overall. The Varsity team placed third out of 32 school representes. Stanford was indeed a challenge.

When asked, Cross-country runners stated that coaches Joe King and Kerri LaCroix were super supportive and kept us together while going through and surviving rough tough times. When it came to the North Coast Sectionals, the team placed third. In any case the runners trained, tried, and took an award or two home to Encinal.

Boys' and Girls' Tennis Teams Show Their Endurance

Fifteen strongwilled and determined girls made up the 1988 Girls' Tennis team. Four returning veterans were the nucleus of a team of young, but aggressive players.

Ten hours of practice were averaged each week. The Lady Jets concentrated on vollies and serves as they challenged each other for the top five positions on the team's traditional ladder, developed by Coach Rebensdorf to determine the standings of the players on the team. Mr. Rebensdorf supervised the girls during practices on Mondays thru Thursdays. He assisted the team with helpful tips and contributed his expertise in the sport to improve the girls' techniques. Friday practices were optional, and many claimed they were advantageous.

For the second year in a row, Veronica Wimer reigned as the #1 player. Her powerful slams, graceful strokes, and hard-to-return serves earned her the honoring title, as Jessica Gotay came through as #2. "Jessica is the reliable member of the team, and has a good attitude. I can always count on her to do her best," noted Mr. Rebensdorf. The #3 player and also named The Most Improved player was Sherilyn Huie. Sheri had developed very solid ground strokes and excelled in pacing the ball within point. Her strong abilities eventually led Encinal to their first singles' victory against Piedmont in two years.

Overall, the 1988 Girls' Tennis team concluded the year with a league record of 4-8. Although the season was a difficult one, as Veronica Wimer assuringly noted, everyone showed a lot of determination.

The Boys' Tennis team ranked as one of the top three in the Bay Leagues. Jun Ho Chang, Mykal Jaime, Johnny Giang, and Tony Kinsley were the top four players. Mykal had made it to the Jr. tournaments in San Jose, which the Encinal team favorably benefited from during the season.

Gary Lomba, Erik Rebensdorf, Jeff Stone, Ray Guy, and Gary Wright determined the #1 and #2 doubles.

Many members were newcomers, and despite the minority of veterans, the ambitious team proved to be competitive. Even though there were obstacles to overcome, the Boys' Tennis team still managed to polish off the season with grace.

Volleyball Reaches League Playoffs

The season opened with summer practices. With returning Coach Ferir, volleyball was on its way to league playoffs. Varsity with a record of 9-13 and league record of 5-8, they were a determined team. Stress was a factor for the team because they wanted only the best, who doesn't? But the team was more determined than any year before.

New coach, new players, new rackets. Badminton started off fresh this year with new coach Jerry Ludy. Team attendance was high. Unfortunately some had to drop the sport due to conflicting commitments. Ben Mahay said, "I enjoy badminton it's something that wasn't available in Junior High." Efren Caraveo said, "I'll miss the team it was a lot of fun." "Badmintoneers" had a fair season. Their toughest opponent was Head-Royce.

Report Focuses on Interesting Soccer View Point

One victory followed another in January as the girls' soccer team nailed Piedmont and then blasted Skyline High. Unfortunately that was the "Great News." The "good news" included the fact that Kirstin McVicker made All League for her 145 goal keeper saves. She was joined by two other All League Soccer players from Encinal. They were Christine Roveda and Ann Murphy. More good new included the Honorable Mentions snagged by Carrie Trombly and Stephanie Rush. The Bad news was that the team lost more games than they won; however, one could always report they tied half as many games as the games they won.

The Men's Soccer Team excelled in that they played well together and had some fine talent. Adam Kruse, the team goalie, was noted for blocking the opposition team from scoring. Nathan Hayes, fullback, was outstanding all year for keeping the ball in the opponents territory. Kunle Thomas, center half, was near perfection in the art of goal tending.

As a result the men of Encinal had a victorious and good year.

Lady Jets Capture 1st Place in ESAL

Over a five month period, the Lady Jets practiced two hours a day. They dribbled, shot hoops, and mastered a passing game. The hoopsters ended the twenty-two game league season as number one. Practice clearly paid off.

The girls won more than half of their games, sixteen out of twenty-two. Their plays, plus high scores, brought the "Jets" a play-off spot at Cal State Hayward, that then lead to the North Coast Sectionals. Players, Deonca Dollison, and Yulonda Hampton made the team steam and steam roll over opponents as they pumped points into the basket, time after time. Between them, they scored 411 points for the team, Deonca Dollison 204 and Yulonda Hampton 207.

Never forgotten victories were the games against Albany and Alameda. They were the memory making games of '88-89. The wildest game featured the Albany Cougars, all girl basketball players. The cats were not tamed, and with a score of 68 for the lady Jets and 14 for the Cougarettes, feelings flared. Somehow in the aftergame melee, Amy Wagner's ear lobe was ripped and needed stitches. One wag later claimed that one of the Cougar Kittens clearly had her nails polished, pared, and pointed in a fashion any cat would like. However, no one with sense, accepted that bit of catty nonsense.

The best game for knowing that winning feeling came with the victory over crosstown rival, Alameda. Thirty-three to thrity-one was the score, lifted the Jets to the heights of ecstasy.

The name "Lady Jets" really suited the girls. They were tough players but they were as close as a big family. According to Chuck Fehely, "After all the years of coaching, this was the best . . . I treated them all like daughters."

Basketball: 10-0 Jet Effort 10 Perfection Zip

The 1988-89 Varsity Basketball team was dominated by ineligibility. The Jets were expected to top the list of ESAL teams before semester grades were revealed. J. R. rider, Encinals expected top scorer, was declared ineligible to play for the basketball team his senior year. Early in the season, Junior Rod Brown contributed many talents to the team but was also found ineligible. During the year, three other team members took their leave from basketball. This enabled three Junior Varsity players, Vince Baca, Jacques Christopher and Chris Pondok, to gain experience on the varsity team.

The men practiced daily after school for a grueling 3½ hours. On a regular week the teams both participated in two games, usually on Tuesday and Friday. During non-league play the team traveled for six games in two tournaments and five other pre-season trips. During the season, the Jets win-loss record was an upsetting 7 and 18 for the season. This included a discouraging loss to our rivals the Alameda Hornets.

Although their records do not show it, this varsity team's statistics revealed some true talent. Senior Tim Canalin was voted Most Valuable Player and top assister. Monte Monroe, in his first year playing for Encinal, captured the highest scorer award. The Mr. Hustle title went go Greg Johnson, a senior in his forth year of JETS Basketball. Perfection evaded E.H.S., but effort we had.

The Junior Varsity team struggled through the season with a win-loss record of 1 and 20. The team's most exciting win was an intense shootout at the buzzer against Castro Valley. High scorers were Jacques Christopher, Vince Baca and Chris Pondok.

Jet Wrestlers Champions in a Different Way

Champions was not the terms of the day for Jet wrestlers in 1988-89. Rebuilding with rookies and facing reality were the true tales of EHS mat men.

Overeating was no problem. The weight classes ranged from 98 lbs. to 245 lbs. and in order to maintain an ideal wrestling weight "pigging out" was not an option. "Run and exercise, then run and exercise some more," coupled with an intelligent diet was the routine rule followed all year.

Like all sports, all the body and mental conditioning plus all the safety precaution taken did not prevent injury. Two Jet wrestlers suffered more than bruises. Edward Mendoza broke his leg and A. J. Ibert's appendix did him in. Aside from such negatives and in review of the season some highlights were well remembered.

Team members produced their first pins in the Los Lomas match. Even so, the mat-men lost 48-18. When one wrestler talked to another they usually remembered the speediest pin time. It belonged to Jeff Wall who pinned one opponent in 00:43 seconds.

When the '89-89 season was over, there were other wrestlers who held records. Eric Mahoney had, all agreed, the most devastating hold. The most improved wrestler was Sam Ochoa and Mel Griffith held down the title of the most dedicated wrestler. "The Ace Wrestler" turned out to be not one but two athletes who had a great wrestling year: Eric Mahoney and Jared Whitemore.

Most of the team remembered Salesian as the greatest overall match. A match the team came so close to winning they could almost taste the victory; however the final score favored Salesian with a 27-24 point spread. The mat-men also remembered Miramonte as their toughest opponent and a school that grounded our Jets 48-6.

There may have been a great match in '88-89, but there was also a grand slam memory of a tournament. The Piner blast placed John Wall, wrestling in his very first match of the season, in second place for his weight class. Edward Mendoza took the "bronze" or third, and Milton Primas and Sam Ochoa shared the sixth spot. With these type of remembrances the mat-men felt like champions and they knew '88-89 the rebuilding of our wrestling machine was well on its way.

"Swimming and Polo Make a Splash"

Slam! Dunk! Splash! Such terms were not basketball pauguaqe, they were the new poloese of Encinal High. Fall 1989 brought students to school, swimmers to a new teaching-coach.

Roughly twenty competitors turned out for the first water polo try outs and where the season began there were roughly twenty polo enthusiasts slamming and dunking, throwing and volleying the ball. Because the team wasn't completely formed when the season opened the "jet mermen" entered competition late. For a first time team, late was better than never. A fourth place finish wasn't too shabby and certainly set the stage of 1989's competitors.

Spring meant polo players moved from polo to a rugged sport called swimming. Among these players were Ruben Tapia, Charles Vigney, and Alex Ham who were nominated to be the best male swimmers. Among the girls were Ryann Haines, a four year vet, Kim Absner a new frosh, and Charity Holland were said to be the "mermaids" of the team.

The swimmers started out with a win loss season, guys won their events and the ladies were beat by a mere 14 points. Our first meet was against San Leandro High, for an opener it was rough. Ruben Tapia beat the E.H.S record for back stroke. The year was great and everyone had improved enormously, the way swimmers strove for their goals only went to show, next year E.H.S won't be beat!

EHS Baseball Displays Season of Skilled Players

Encinal 5, McAteer 2, wasn't that the way to start a varsity baseball season? The "Jet" victory was a result of experienced players. Seniors Tim Canalin and Robert Heggie took their stance, while George "Fast-hand" Kinard contributed to victory with curve balls, fastballs, and sliders. Although the "Bash Brothers" belonged to the Oakland A's, our Jets had the "Smash Brothers" as Jared Kellar, Tony Tenorio, and Kyle White delivered solid hits that sent the opposing teams scrambling. The 8 returning lettermen of "87-88" season added spice and flare to the season's games. Coach Tim Marr's team battled the opposing nines with ingenious strategies and the Hit and Run.

Practice for the varsity averaged to two and one-half hours daily. Special attention was placed on double plays, the bunt, and sealing bases. (Probably the all pervading influence of the A's on local Jet players.)

Even though the Junior Varsity started their season with a losing battle against Tennyson, their next winning game against Arroyo helped their attitude. They were also winners against Berkeley, Miramonte, and Irvington. In these games, Christopher Scherbert displayed his pitching ability and Fabian Moreno rapped out the team's first runs. With most of the season played after the yearbook deadline most facts and stats were unavailable.

'88 Softball Champs Rebuild Team in '89

Decimated and deprived of returning letterwomen the Lady Jet Softball Champions of 1988 rebuilt their 1989 team. If it had been a score the team numbers read: vets, seven: rookies eight! Every championship team sooner or later rebuilds due to retirements in the pros and graduations in high school. Rebuilding was the '89 story.

Late in February practice started. Coach Dave Johns started workout not after school but in sixth period P.E. Such engagements of the muscles continued for many a day for up to two hours after class.

The essential skilled player for any softball squad was the pitcher. Encinal desperately needed a new pitcher. One so-called expert on the game flatly stated that about 85% of a good team lay behind the ability of a good pitcher. Antionette Coley was the team's best pitcher as the season started. Taking a page from Oakland A's let us hope Antionette never meets up with a pair of "Bash Sisters", a la A's, during the '89 conference. Unfortunately the yearbook went into publication in mid-March in order to make a June delivery of books, therefore her stats were unavailable.

In order to prevent the catching artistry so often seen in the Peanuts cartoon team, where Lucy's great catch is often foiled, Coach Johns helped the girls with catching by using the pitching machine to spit balls out and help catchers maximize their ability. Five hours each week was spent on catching practice. Again preseason judgements indicated Lori Kelly had the speed and hand-eye coordination to make any catch look easy. Catching was important to everyone and rookie Michelle Alioto worked to perfect that skill in order to nail down a third base assignment.

The crucial question finally came. Even if the girls pitched and caught well those two talents didn't win games. What won games was hitting. Michelle Dunivin, after a batting practice, put it quite simply when she stated: "It's all strength in the arms."

A new Jet Team faced a fourteen-week long season with twenty-six games. The toughest competition shaped up, even at the season's start, to be cross-town rival Alameda, a team known for having the good pitching.

The girls opened against Holy Names. They drubbed, no, slaughtered the Monarchs 25-3, returned home winners with the feeling practice paid off.

Season Starts Late for Large EHS Track Team

Take one enlarged athletic league (the ESAL or East Shore Athletic League) add one postponed start for the track season, and the combo equals a blessing for the Jet track team. The addition of the Richmond and Kennedy High School teams postponed the ESAL season starter. The February 23rd opening date was beneficial for Encinal High as it gave the forty-two new cindermen a chance to practice daily with the returning twenty veterans. Times have really changed, as the 1989 version of the Jet track team had twice as many women as men in its ranks. Of the sixty-two runners, forty future Florence Griffith-Joyners dominated the twenty-two future Carl Lewises.

The long distance team, coached by Joe King, was in great form at the seasons start due to the returning veterans: Mike Brunetti, Brock Dickie, and Blair Venables. On the other hand, the 440 relay team, Riel Custodio, Perry Moore, and Joel Thornton, searched for a new member due to the graduation of their anchor in '88. Senior Jamie Carrol stepped forward to meet this challenge.

The field events had hurdlers: Allen Diwa, Bernard Hawkins, Kirsta Lindsay, and Carrie Trombley. Their workout zeroed in on perfecting their "lean" so they could glide smoothly over the hurdles. Shotputters and long jumpers faired well too, with returning veterans: Troy Gordon, Pam Burge and William Walters.

Three factors were clear at the start of the track season. First the veterans inspired the fledgling tracksters. Secondly, coach Kerry LaCroix, a former Encinal High trackster, was excited by the large turnout of student athletes, and she predicted that a continued growth of students involved in sports meant "that Encinal can be #1 in the league in all sport endeavors." The final factor was one no one can control. Since the yearbook goes to the publisher twelve to fourteen weeks before the end of the school year, and since the season opened late there was no information on speed records broken, shotput distances smashed, or 440 relay triumphs.

The world witnessed international champions vie for the Olympic gold in Seoul, America saw its presidential hopefuls fight for the Oval Office in Washington, D.C., and Encinal High watched its athletes compete for the E.S.A.L. awards here in Alameda.

1988-89 was the third season that Encinal had been in the East Shore Athletic League, and once again, E.H.S. "jocks and jockettes" displayed the talent and luck to defeat the other teams in the league.

Cross-country runners made miles disappear. Their abilities broke records and gained E.S.A.L. honors for five runners of the E.H.S. Men's Varsity team. The dedicated fivesome included Matt Boone, Mike Brunetti, Brock Dickie, and Blair and Brice Venables. From the Women's Varsity team came Kiran Grewal and Christine Roveda, whose speed and determination also snared them awards.

On the football field, yards run, passes thrown, plus touchdowns made developed into E.S.A.L. awards for skilled Varsity Football players Eric Alden, Greg Johnson, and Joel Thornton.

On the volleyball court, spirit and experience earned Luisa Suesue the All-League player award for the Girls' Volleyball team.

Later in the year, Men's Varsity Soccer players Nathan Hayes, Matt Perata, and Kunle Thomas scored both on and off the field. They helped win games for their team. Furthermore, this talented trio won All-League honors for themselves. The Women's Varsity Soccer team also sported three All-League players of its own: Kirsten McVicker, Ann Murphy, and Christine Roveda.

Basketball season produced award-winning Varsity players. Yulanda Hampton and Deonca Dollison easily captured E.S.A.L. awards for the girls' team.

Although the East Shore Athletic League games lacked the glamour of the Olympics, fortunately they also lacked controversy such as the steroid scandal of '88. The league also avoided the simplified sloganeering of the presidential election. E.S.A.L. did what sports should do. It provided the opportunity for athletes to show off their talents and for some to win awards that fueled Jet pride and reflected favorably on each winner.

Historical First, Frosh Win Homecoming Prize

Optimistic frosh entered the "hallowed halls" of learning called Encinal High in September filled with spirit and plans for the future. Three hundred and forty strong, the group settled into finding their classes, learning there was no elevator, and attempting to look suave and sophisticated. Their first problem surfaced quickly, they had no elected officers. The second problem was the obvious they were paupers or in Wall Street terms they were flat broke. By mid-October elections had been held and Nicole McRae took over as the first president for the class of '92; however the class was still financially strapped.

Spirit and plans for the future were then put into effect. First came spirit week and traditional E.H.S. homecoming festivities. The freshman theme zeroed in on "Where it all Began." Their hall festooned with plush teddy bears, imitation lollipops, and colorful balloons emphasized it all began in early childhood.

In the homecoming skit they chanted early childhood learnings such as: "Share everything, play fair, don't hit people, put things back where you found them, and clean up your own mess!" These brief and blunt phrases represented the freshmen philosophy which was, help others and you help yourself and enrich the spirit of the class. We had philosophically deep frosh.

Philosophy aside, childhood learnings overcome, the race for 'Homecoming Super Class' rocked the school. Believe it or not for the first time in history the freshmen class snatched second place in all the homecoming and spirit activities! As exciting as second sounded it must be noted that the frosh triumph occurred because the other three classes tied for first, that was also a history maker.

After spirit week madness had vanished the freshmen turned to fund raising activities. A bake sale and a unique photo-button sale benefited customers and financially added to the fifty dollars of prize money that was rewarded for the second place triumph. By years end the frosh were confident and financially successful.

CRACK'IN UP WITH LAUGHING MATTERS

ABOVE: RICHARD BONOAN and Emily Martin are in a strange predicament. Are they right side-up or up side down? You decide.

September is when millions of shining, happy faces turn toward school. They belong to mothers.

Afternoon nap: matinee idle.

Almost 500 years ago Columbus set out for the East Indies and wound up in the Caribbean.

Today when you set out for the East Indies you get to the East Indies. It's your luggage that winds up in the Caribbean.

When it was time for the 5-year-old's first professional haircut, his grandfather asked to take him. The parents, thinking the close relationship between the two would ease the ordeal, readily agreed-and were astonished when the boy began to cry.

"No!" he bellowed. "I don't wanna go to Grandpa's barber!"

"Why on earth not?" asked the bemused parents.

"Cause he cuts a big hole in the top of Grandpa's hair," wailed the lad, "an' I don't want one in mine!

Auction house: a place to get something for nodding.

First diner (Reaching for yet another roll): "I really must start watching my waistline." Second diner: "How fortunate it's right out there where you can!"

Hear about the restaurant they just opened on the moon? Great food, no atmosphere.

The junior college routinely cancels a course if fewer than 15 students register for it, and "The American Revolution and the War of 1812" was thus threatened-until its savvy instructor changed the catalog listing to read "13-Star Wars and the British Empire Strikes Back."

In the 1930s people paid 10 cents to see a movie. Now they pay several hundred dollars for a TV set-and see the same movie.

Anybody who thinks there's plenty of room at the top has a lot to learn about pyramids.

One player's mother was trying to cheer up the Little League coach after his team's disastrous season. "They're certainly good losers."

"Good?" howled the miserable coach. "Lady, they're perfect!"

BELOW: BLOWING BUBBLES was Kirsten McVicker's purpose, but it looks like she wanted to take a sip of it before proceeding to blow them.
